WHAT YOU DID Opened a new chat.

And started typing the entire job again.

DO NOT DISASSEMBLE

The new chat knows nothing. Starting over throws away what it already learned about your job.

1 Say what is wrong with this one

SAY

Not try again. Not make it better. Those get you a different answer, not a better one. Name the part.

The second paragraph is not true.
This is twice as long as I need.
It is written for the wrong person.

2 One change at a time

ONE

Ask for three fixes in one message and you get a new answer with new problems, and no way to tell which change caused them. Cut it in half. Read it. Then the next one.

3 Stay in the same conversation

STAY

Everything you already gave it is still sitting there.

You are tightening one joint. You are not taking the furniture apart.

HERE IS MINE · WORKED EXAMPLE

I was writing one of these guides and the example in it was way too soft. Nothing about it sounded all that bad, so it taught nobody anything. I did not start over. I said the example does not show a large enough error. One change. Then the next one. What you watched was about the fourth version.

SAY The one thing wrong with it

ONE The single change I am asking for
